'Super Department' for DC Considered

A new "super-department" which would combine Daly City's current Planning Department and Redevelopment Division with a Housing and Research section, was made public by City Mgr. David Rowe March 13.

Rowe's proposal was aired before the city's five-member Planning Commission in response to a Citizens Housing Advisory Committee report he has had under study for several weeks.

The new agency would be called the "Department of Community Development." It would consist of a director, whose duties would include overseeing activities of an Advance Planning and Research Section; City Planning staff, and, a Housing and Development Division.

Rowe presented his proposal as an alternate to establishment of a city Housing Commission.

The Housing Advisory Committee, before dissolving itself late last year, recommended such a commission be set up to promote adequate housing for low income and elderly groups, along with controlled planning in the housing field.

"I want it understood I do not support establishment of a Housing Commission," Rowe said.

He said the city's current Planning Commission, City Council and Redevelopment Agency Board, already has the responsibility to provide housing for citizens.

Instead of adding to the myriad commissions and committees, Rowe said he feels his proposed new department would cut government red tape in planning, funding and surveying housing needs of the city.

Both the director's position and that of a staff for Advance Planning and Research would be new departments within the city.

Rowe said it was possible much of the research and planning might be done "on a consulting basis."

What has held back Daly City's attempts to build moderate and low income housing for elderly is the federal governments freeze on funding of such ventures since early last year, Rowe pointed out.

The city manager said Daly City is a "bedroom community" and that almost all of the city's land area is devoted to housing.

And in spite of Daly City's increased new home sales, the market value of a home remains some $4,000 less than the average price of a home anywhere else in San Mateo County, he said.

"Daly City's housing mix is well distributed in terms of racial and ethnic minorities. The city has 13 per cent of the county's total population, however, provides housing for 21 per cent of the county's minority population," Rowe said, adding, "1970 census figures indicate that 31.6 per cent of Daly City's population is in the census minority classifications."

This minority population of the county's second largest city is spread in all census tracts through the city, Rowe said.

Rowe said the city staff concurs with much of the housing committee's report, however, he steadfastly maintained there was no need for a Housing Commission.

Another part of the report that came under fire from Rowe was a section that explained the need to increase vacancies.

'Very, Very Harsh Law'

Proposed Sign Law Ruffles Merchants

Merchant representatives from the Mission Street-Junipero Serra Boulevard area again voiced dissatisfaction with a proposed sign ordinance at the March 13 Planning Commission meeting in Daly City.

Their chief objection is the amount of money it would take the average small businessman along this already-financially depressed business street to comply with the new law which would forbid, if immediately enforced, about 90 per cent of all signs.

Speaking on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce, Frank Spadarella stuck by his earlier stand — that the new sign law would be good for the district, but to allow attrition to remove the existing signs.

He said some 14 years ago the then-City Council set a precedent by including such a clause in its zoning code concerning signs.

This "grandfather clause" was enacted because the council saw the "substantial investment" businessmen had made in signs and they wanted to offer some sort of protection to them, Spadarella said.

He accused the city staff of attempting to penalize the small merchant" by inacting a "very, very harsh" law that would make it financially nonfeasable for them to comply with.

Shortly before the Wednesday meeting got underway, the city's planning staff distributed alternative proposals to the sign ordinance.

Both Spadarella, who said he had been studying the original proposal since last October and had already held several meetings with city staff members on the subject, and Chamber Manager Peter J. Markovich said they had not had time to study the new proposals.

Assistant City Planner Bill Wojowski started earlier existing zoning ordinance contained a clause which allowed amortization of nonconforming signs.

Spadarella said this was "an erroneous statement and I take exception to it."

Mission Merchants Association representative Elton McGraw said his organization was in "full accord" with Spadarella in his statements on the controversial issue.

McGraw also explained that Mission Street was a depressed business area that needed a shot in the arm to get it back on its feet. He said such a sign law would financially cripple the district.

Both Mission Street and Junipero Serra Boulevard are now included in the city's redevelopment project area. It was hoped by some merchants and city officials this area could be upgraded through redevelopment.

"We're not out to hurt anyone. I think you're putting the cart before the horse," Commissioner Frank Tardelli told the merchants.

Tardelli said the city doesn't know what direction redevelopment will take.

Wojtkowski, noting that the sign law would help the average merchant by cutting away red tape, said his office isn't "trying to pass anything over on the merchants."

He said this was the first public meeting on the issue.

Newlyweds Killed in Collision

Two persons were killed and two others seriously injured Monday in a grinding headon crash on the Guadalupe Canyon Parkway near the summit of San Bruno Mountain about 5 p.m.

Fatally injured in the collision were newlyweds Frank Gersich, 23, and hi wife, Nancy, 20, of 302 Palmetto Drive, Pacifica.

They had been married only six months.

The Gersich car was traveling westbound over the mountain road, a California Highway Patrol officer said, when it crossed over the divider strip and slammed headon into a car driven by Patrick Robert Montgomery, 20, of Palomar Drive, Redwood City.

A passenger in Montgomery's car, Charlene Whiteside, 20, address unknown, suffered multiple injuries in the collision.

Both Miss Whiteside and Montgomery were reported in fair condition this morning at Mary's Help Hospital.

Daly City firemen were called to the scene to recover Gersich.

Auto Pursuit Ends in Crash

A high-speed car chase through six North County cities ended in a spectacular crash early Tuesday after the driver of the expensive sportscar involved in the pursuit smashed into two police cars and catapulted some 50 feet into the air before slamming back to the roadway upside down.

The driver, identified as Stratos Joseph Papageorgiou, 19, of 72 Westfield, Daly City, miraculously escaped with a skull fracture and was reported in fair condition at Mary's Help Hospital.

The chase started in Millbrae according to police shortly after 1 a.m. when officer John Marty reportedly observed Papageorgiou driving erratically down El Camino Real.

Officer Marty said he stopped the driver and after he climbed out of his patrol car, the man stepped on the gas of his high-powered sportscar and fled the scene.

As the pursuit went through Burlingame, officer John Parkin joined the chase.

Speeds of 90 miles per hour were reached as the car, with officers Marty and Parkin following, roared through San Bruno, South San Francisco, Colma and on into Daly City.

For a moment, Papageorby pulling onto the lawn of a by pulling onto the law of a savings and loan company office in Millbrae as police sped past.

But police were soon back on his tail and the chase continued, down El Camino Real, Hickey Blvd., and north on the Junipero Serra Freeway.

Near the San Pedro Road offramp to the freeway, the speeding car broadsided a Daly City police car driven by Officer Mike McVey.

McEvey was not injured.

Seconds later, Papageorgiou's car hit a viaduct, bounced off and shot into the air.

He was ejected "either after it (the car) hit the ground or while it was still in the air," Police Sgt. Dennis Sheehy said.

The car was completely demosished, Sheehey stated.

Sheehy said the driver is expected to be cited for drunk driving and assault with a deadly weapon (the car) upon his release from the hospital.

Commission Again Seeks Ruling

The Jefferson Elementary School District's independent Personnel Commission Monday decided to skirt the district attorney and seek a court ruling instead, for the second time in two weeks.

The commission and the trustees have been feuding over budgetary and other matters.

The commissioners took action to start a petition of declaratory relief action, "to get some clarification of the Personnel Commission budget in relation to the feelings of both the board and the commission." It also stated that it was "hopeful" the board and commission might be able to resolve "their differences and problems," in view of the petition.

The employment of attorney William Johnson was continued to pursue the petition, which will be presented first to the district attorney for approval, a Personnel Commission source explained.

The commission wants what they consider a firmer court ruling, instead of an opinion from the district attorney.

An earlier petition, on "restricted positions," this week was delivered to the district attorney for review, the personnel office source said.

Daly City To Ask for $417,000

Transportation Funds Sought

By FRANK LaPIERRE

Daly City is expected to soon apply for some $417,000 in special funding to conduct a transportation feasability survey and, possibly a city-wide bus system.

Application will be made next week to the Metropolitan Transportation Commission (MTC) for the monies needed to put Daly City on the right route toward establishment of its own system.

Councilman Victor Kyriakis had made public his transportation study last month, pointing up the need for a good, on-time bus system which would benefit all citizens — young and old alike.

One part of Kyriakis' report, however, will be modified. That is a section passage that notes any bus system in Daly City would operate in the red.

Although city bus systems throughout the country rarely, if ever, are able to operate out of the cash box, some council members think such a statement is too strong and asked that it be changed to a "perhaps" rather than "will" result in deficit spending.

There were no figures available as to how much of a deficit such a system might show. This would be part of the MTC study.

The MTC itself asks that "philosophical considerations" regarding such deficits be anticipated and clearly understood before undertaking establishment of transportation systems in cities.

Until recently it had been assumed by the city that accrued monies received under the Transit Development Act of 1971 would await whatever action the city decided upon on an annual allocation.

However, assistant city manager Ray Letsinger dissolved that thinking when he revealed if the city did not apply for the nearly half-million dollars it now has in the MTC kitty it would lose it.

In light of this it was decided to make application for the full amount as a move toward "locking it up."

The MTC would then put the funds in trust to be later used by the city if and when studies indicated the feasability of a transit system.

Meanwhile, the first step toward establishment of such a system would be application for a $50,000 study, coupled with discussions on the subject between the city, Northgate Transit Company representatives and various other interested agencies.

The council was also told by City Manager David Rowe that efforts are now being made to set up a joint meeting between himself, Mayor McRobert Stewart and members of the school board regarding the annual recreation contract. The Jefferson Elementary School District (JESD) annually turns over about $49,000 to the city for a citywide recreation program.

However, in recent years some members of the school board have voiced dissatisfaction with the program and they are now insisting on having a bigger voice in the issue.

A letter was sent to superintendent Keith Breon last week regarding the meeting, however no reply has, as yet, been received, Rowe said.

There was some discussion by senior citizens' representatives Monday concerning a plan for construction of 127 apartment units, with 30 of the units designed for senior citizens.

The proposed complex, expected to get the green light Monday by the council, is located south of Southgate Avenue, near Mary's Help Hospital.

Mrs. Virgel Davis said it was the first time any non-government subsidized housing for senior citizens had been considered for the city and felt it was a step in the right direction.

Even though rents were considerably high, (starting rental some $180 per month), there were a sufficient number of seniors in the area who could afford the units, Mrs. Davis said.

Fernando Relocation Plans OKd

The Jefferson Elementary School District Board of Trustees has given the green light to a Palo Alto architect firm to start drafting plans for the relocation and modernizing of Fernando Rivera School Junior High School.

Proposals call for the Fernando Rivera School to be moved out of Westlake Park in Daly City and relocated at the Thomas Edison school site a mile away.

Estimated costs of Phase One of the project is some $425,000 and will include the moving of several portable classrooms and remodeling of existing buildings at the Thomas Edison site to facilitate junior high school students.

The board took this action after it became evident the district is suffering from a declining student enrollment and tighter budget and cannot go ahead with the so-called "Savage School" project in St. Francis Heights, for the time being.

In recent years, the Sav-

Writ Stalls Brisbane Police Chief Hearing

A hearing into the firing of former Brisbane Police Chief Billy E. Beard, scheduled for last Friday at 9 a.m., won an "eleventh hour reprieve after three members of the city council were served with writs of mandate by Beard's attoreney Thursday night.

Attorney George Corey, representing the ousted chief, based his argument for the continuance on the council's actions of March 12, in which a majority of the board rejected the results of the March 5 municipal elections and called for new city-wide elections, disregarding the advice of city attorney David Friedenberg.

Corey appeared before the council Thursday night and charged them with being an "illegally constituted board," pointing out their actions s in rejecting the election and calling for new elections violated existing law.

The writ was served on Brisbane Mayor S. J. Guardino, and Councilmen James E. Williams and Paul Goercke.

It was signed by Superior Court Judge Lyle Edson late Thursday afternoon — scant hours before the council meeting got underway.

Along with the writ, Beard failed a taxpayer's suit asking that the council be forced to comply with the State Election Code in accepting the canvass of votes of the municipal elections of March 5 and to swear in those persons elected.

Last Monday, and again on Tuesday, in meetings with the council, City Attorney Friedenberg advised the five-member board that under election code law (sections 22932 and 22932.5) they were required to canvass the votes and swear in the new council members.

The council did not have the authority to "look behind the reasons for the vote" in the case of alleged "irregularities" in the vote count, Friedenberg said.

Both Corey and Friedenberg agreed, on separate occasions, that the council should have merely canvassed the votes and swear in new council members and then challenged the election in the courts.

However, Mayor Guardino said he was told informally by San Mateo County Municipal Judge Charles Becker the council had indeed acted properly in its refusal to canvass the votes and to call for new elections.

Contacted on the subject, Judge Becker said he did not understand "what Mayor Guardino is talking about."

"I have never and would never advise (him) on such a matter," Judge Becker said.

Judge Becker did say that Guardino had called him on the phone to ask if the council could ask for new elections and reject the election results.

"I said I didn't think they could do this," Judge Becker said.

The Strike that Killed Somorra

They became known as the Dead City Scrolls — the amazing recorded story of the death of Somorra, once known as the jewel of Atlantis. After discovering the long-lost continent, scientists were puzzled by the seeming early demise of its largest city. While most of the land was covered by volcanic ash and sedimentary deposits, the material covering Somorra was something else, and predated the other layers by at least a hundred years.

Burrowing through to the city itself, archaeologists found the scrolls. These were a chronicle of the last days of Somorra, and told an extraordinary tale.

Somorra had acquired strange ways in the decades before its end. More and more of its people had taken jobs with the city — so many that every family had at least one member on the public payroll.

As time went on the demands of the city's workers grew, and the methods of enforcing them expanded. If a group of workers had even the smallest grievance, all other employes of the city also refused to work.

The last and greatest strike of Somorrans arose from the demands of the whiffle tree union. Actually, the city only employed one worker to maintain whiffle trees, and he was president, secretary, and the full membership of his union. Even though, in accordance with a formula that had been long established, the whiffle tree employes of Somorra received a higher wage than any other whiffle tree worker in all Atlantis, he was dissatisfied. His complaint arose from earlier city action classifying granite debris sweepers as geological engineers, and granting them twice as much money as whiffle tree workers.

So one day this single city employe struck. He posted a granite block by his workshed, and in short time the horsemen quit working, soon followed by maintenance employes, clerks, police, teachers, and so on and on.

In a very few days Somorra became an unpleasant place to live, and the city fathers called on the Tribune to negotiate the demands of the workers and the city. The Tribune, Josephus Charismo Lindsae, was perfectly suited to end the trouble. He had done it many times before, speaking beautifully for both sides. Both sides? Certainly. His practice was to argue each case loudly, one moment demanding lower cost of government, and the very next demanding fairer, and hence higher wages.

Workers and taxpayers, most of whom were the same people, loved their Tribune for the way he argued with himself. Cheers greeted his angry demands for lower taxes, and equally clamorous hurrahs met his arguments for more money per hour.

He had been elected again and again, simply because he spoke for everyone. The Tribune was especially admired for his talent in making big strikes out of little ones. But this last time things had gone too far, and the Tribune's best arguments failed to close the gap between demand and offer.

The city, of course, had come to a standstill. At first the people suffered inconvenience, but they were used to this. Then garbage began to pile up, and sewage was untended. Later, the Tribune came to the forum each day in boots, and finally remained at his office when walking through the city became impossible. Neither side would give in, and the Tribune put in the best performance of Somorran history. He was so good in both roles that the strike could not be settled, and the people and workers urged him to fight on and on. High officials from outside Somorra offered help. The Tribune, however, made it plan as to where they could go. On this, the workers and citizens could agree — this was their own mess and no ouhsider was going to save them or their city.

When unearthed, one of the most remarkable things about Somorra was the state of preservation of the city and its people. The Tribune was easily identifiable — he was found standing on the top of his desk, mouth wide open, as he had remained for centuries.

The rest of the people? The chronicle tells a sad tale. The Tribune had been a very special person — he was not only the city's leader, but was its shortest adult citizen. He had, therefore, been the first to go. His drowning had left the rest demoralized. There was no one left who could argue for either side, and all perished in the rising tide.

Bitter, Sweet Meet in Daly City

There were equal amounts of bitter mixed with the sweet at the March 12 special council meeting in Daly City which seated newly elected Councilman William Schumacher and bid farewell to veteran Councilman Bernard J. Lycett.

Plaudits were generously given to Lycett on the occasion of his leaving the City Council after some 10 years of service by Mayor Anthony Giammona and fellow Councilmen McRobert Stewart and Victor Kyriakis.

Lycett lost his bid for reelection in the March 5 municipal elections in which Stewart and Kyriakis won back their seats, and Schumacher was elected to the council.

Giammona praised Lycett for his many years of service on local, state, regional and county levels and said the outgoing councilman "is a real credit to Daly City."

The overflow crowd packing City Hall for the ceremonies gave Lycett a prolonged standing ovation.

Next to pass on a few words of praise to Lycett was Stewart — later named by a unanimous vote of the council to be the city's mayor.

Stewart said Lycett had actually done the work of two people in representing his city. And it will be hard to find another person "that will give of his time as he has," Stewart said.

"He (Lycett) has brought respect and dignity to (elected) office," Stewart said.

Last to speak was Kyriakis, who will continue on for the next year as the city's mayor pro-tempore.

Kyriakis' brief statement pointed out that Lycett "has served his city well" and went on to say in effect that those who followed in Lycett's footsteps would have some large shoes to fill.

It was Kyriakis' being nominated to remain as the city's mayor pro-tem that prompted Schumacher to cast the lone dissenting vote on the matter.

Responding to the praise, Lycett said he was "very humble" and that he could see "nothing but victory for this city."

The addition of Schumacher to the council would "add to the board," Lycett said.

When he first knew he had been defeated at the polls "I was shocked."

"Then, as I sat licking my wounds I learned how lucky I was; to have good friends, friends who came by to express their feelings. It was as though defeat was almost better than victory in knowing how all these peope felt," Lycett said.

In slightly less than 11 minutes, the special council meeting was adjourned, and Lycett left the council table, and more than a decade of public service behind.

Schumacher's objection to Kyriakis remaining as vice mayor was the first split.

The second was a larger split, a 3-2 rift, as Councilman Paul Hupf protested the naming of Giammona as director of the North San Mateo County Sanitation District along with Stewart.

While the mayor is automatically appointed to this post, Hupf wanted Giammona out (he held the post as mayor) and Schumacher in.

Hupf said he put the name of Schumacher forward because of the "significant vote count he received" in the last election.

Schumacher topped the vote count with some 5,850 votes.

However, Hupf's nomination died for lack of a second and final vote on the issue was split with Giammona, Kyriakis and Stewart voting for, and Hupf and Schumacher voting against.

age School site has become a bone of contention between some members of the school board over whether it is feasible to spend the necessary monies (estimated at $2 million) to build a junior high school in this area.

The area is almost completely surrounded by senior citizen complexes, convalescent homes, medical offices and is located immediately adjacent to the Cabrillo Freeway.

If the board later decides to expand its Fernando Rivera campus through construction of new buildings, costs may run more than $1.2 million.

for a recount of votes, Becker said.

In the March 5 election Anja Miller and Art Montenegro were returned to office, but incumbent Councilman Williams was not.

Williams voted along with Guardino and Goercke to reject the election and seek new elections.

Mrs. Miller said she voted against both matters "because of the advice our city attorney offered."

Montenegro abstained.

One allegation stems from a voter who went to vote about 7:45 p.m. and his name was not on the voting list. He was refused the right to vote, a city hall spokesman said.

Later, after the 8 p.m. poll closing time, it was learned the man was indeed a voter.

He complained that his right to vote was not given him and, in a sworn affidavit, said he would have voted for Jeanne Hodge.

Two Take Oath for SSF Panel

City Clerk Art Rodondi administered the oath of office to newly-elected City Councilmen Richard Battaglia and Leo Padreddii, March 12 in South San Francisco.

The hearty applause from the generally small audience, which went to the South San Francisco High School auditorium to witness the council reorganization, seemed to both the old and the new.

And to the relatively new went the council's leadership.

On a motion by new Councilman Battaglia, with a second by newcomer Padreddii, Terry Mirri, who was elected to office two years ago, became mayor. Then, on motion of Councilman Frank Mammini, Battaglia become the vice mayor.

One of Mirri's first acts as mayor was to praise Patrick Ahern and William Borba. He said they had their own kinds of style and politics and deserved a round of applause.

Mirri said he would perform "in my style" and with "my interpretation of the chair," promising to open the mayor's office three or four times weekly to the citizenry.

Roxe said. "While being a need, city is a need which could not possibly be met by Daly City alone. The city is not an isolated supplier of housing."

The market for housing and the vacancy rate is influenced by available housing in adjoining cities, he said.

It was expected the Planning Commission will first study the report, make its recommendation and either adopt as is or amend the Housing Committee report before forwarding it to the City Council.

To Increase the Tax Base

Daly City Turns to Light Industry

The mood of the Daly City Planning Commission this week was directed toward encouragement of light industry into the city to widen the tax base, and less toward single family housing and apartments.

This was evident on two agenda matters that came before the five member commission at its regular meeting.

A use permit application which would allow a maximum of 127 apartments, with emphasis on apartment units for senior citizens, along with a drug store and restaurant-delicatessen in a Commercial-Office (CO) district, did not receive wholehearted endorsement from the planners.

It was, however, approved after some discussion.

Commission Chairman Al Banfield and Commissioner Frank Tardelli pointed out that land for commercial office space and light industry was becoming extremely scarce in the city and they let it be known they were not enthused with construction of more apartments on such zoned property.

The area in question is located west of Cabrillo Freeway, south of Southgate Avenue, near Mary's Help Hospital.

It was pointed out that the construction of a seven story addition to the hospital might have a dramatic affect on the future use of properties in the area.

Another matter — a proposal to build 73 single family homes in the Market-Florence-Price street area, and 40 homes on property bounded by Lausanne Avenue, East Moltke, Florence and Price Streets — was also the topic of a lengthy debate as to whether such land should go for homes or be used for commercial.

A spokesman for Standard Building, Andrew Cresci, the applicant, said the homes in what is known as the "Blossom Valley" development, would sell for about $39,000.

The Fire Department voiced objection to the plot plans because of two dead-end roads in the tract.

If a fire were to break out in the development, and the road was blocked, equipment would be unable to enter the street to combat the blaze, a fire official argued.

He asked two homes be removed and the street pushed through to connect to other streets in the area.

Again, Chairman Banfield asked if the developer had considered using the land for light industry, instead of housing.

Banfield felt the area, located between the Colma and Kennedy Elementary Schools might be ideal for industry, however Cresci disagreed, noting the makeup of the neighborhood was residential and homeowners might become upset if industry were located there.

Also, Mission Street is only a few blocks away and any commercial would take business away from that shopping area, Cresci said.

Three Found Guilty Of South City Holdup

Three middle-aged men Friday were found guilty on three counts of armed robbery stemming from the Dec. 6 stickup of a South San Francisco tavern, but the same jury issued split verdicts on charges of assaulting police officers during a resultant gunbattle.

A jury of seven women and five men returned the verdicts late Friday against Homer Hayes, 49, Paul G. Arnold, 47, and Carroll Mack Leard, 52.

Superior Court Judge G. Brooks Ice, sitting in for Judge Frank Piombo, home ill, set sentencing for April 5.

The jury found all three defendants guilty of robbing the 57 Club on Airport Boulevard, plus two of its patrons.

It found Hayes and Arnold guilty of assaulting with a deadly weapon Daly City Police Officers Bob Vogt and Bob Sola, but acquitted them of assaulting South San Francisco officer Robert Collins. Leard was acquitted of assaulting any of the officers.

Hayes and Arnold, both of Hayward, testified during the trial that they didn't rob the tavern, and claimed that police initiated gunfire. Officers testified otherwise.

Hayes was wounded in the thigh and arm in the gunbattle.

The prosecution's case focused on Depty Dist. Atty. John O'Leary's theory that Leard "cased" the tavern by asking the bartender to cash a check, and that Arnold and Hayes held it up.

Building Is Found For South City Seniors

Controversy over housing for the South San Francisco Senior Citizens Center and the Park and Recreation Department has been abated with the city finding temporary homes for both.

The City Council, reversing itself on leasing the former Bank of America building on Grand and Linden avenues for a Senior Citizens Center, voted to lease the former Salvation Army building at 230 Grand Ave.

City Manager Ed Alario explained that he had lacked the needed figures for comparison previously, but this week, determined that the Salvation Army building was cheaper, more nearly suited to the city's needs, and had more parking spaces. However, more remodeling will be required. He said he believed that over the three-year lease period this move would save money.

An architect is being sought for the remodeling, currently estimated at $20,000.

Alario conceded that the choice may not make everyone completely happy, but it was the best that could be done on a temporary basis. Merchants who protested use of the Bank of America building continued their objections to the Salvation Army building, but agreed that the new site would not cause as much traffic congestion, Alario said.

The seniors themselves had favored the Bank of America building, but are expected to accept the new quarters, he said.

Alario maintained that the best long-range solution would be to make the Park and Recreation offices and the Senior Citizens Center part of a major recreation center, which is part of the city's Capital Improvements Plan. The center, however, would have to be subjected to a bond issue vote.

The crisis arose last month when the City Council ordered both out of the old Magnolia School because it is a hazard. Recreation workers then were squeezed into the Orange Avenue Recreation Center, and the senior citizens at the Hillside Recreation Center.

A special city council meeting finally resolved the crisis.

Last week, the Park and Recreation Department began moving into new quarters at 3 Linden Ave., the former Bayshore Bowl building, refurbished last year for use by the VTN engineering form. VTN has moved out, since its projects with the city have expired.

The new quarters are lower-priced than the two seriously considered across the street from City Hall, will require almost no remodeling, and will provide 28 parking stalls, according to City Manager Ed Alario.

The South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce is also being provided space in the new quarters.

Council Sets Zoning Meeting in Pacifica

Pacifica city councilmen March 12 voted to set up a schedule of meetings to consider the proposal of the Sharp Park Improvement Council for a down-zoning of their neighborhood.

Theyacted in response to a letter from Emory Lebonville, SPIC president, asking that the City Council start action on the proposal that the city abandon its plan to make Sharp Park a commercial, tourist and high-density residential section.

"We'll need a whole evening, for a heart-to-heart talk over this proposal," Councilman Stan Farber observed. "We'll also need figures to see what this proposal would cost the city."

Lebonville stated that the SPIC's proposal is based on the city's Sharp Park study of April, 1973, and that time for delay is over. He asked for an immediate start on an environmental impact report.

Earlier, Angela Saladino, an SPIC officer, charged that Councilwoman Grace McCarthy said, "We would never get the amendment to the General Plan, which we asked for because people from all over Pacifica drew up that plan which calls for Sharp Park to be the commercial center of the city."

She said last April's Sharp Park study destroys the proponents' premise that redevelopment would be financially benficial to Pacifica.

Mrs. McCarthy denied that she had made that statement, since she said she does not use the word, "never". She also denied that she favored redevelopment, but had sought funds for a neighborhood home improvement program, and the funds ran out on the federal program.

She added that she had read the reports of the various subcommittees, attended the joint City Council-General Plan update subcommittee meeting Aug. 16, 1973.

"I have yet to read or to hear any words to support her conclusions that the people who worked on the 701 Committee are responsible for the adopted General Plan as it relates to Sharp Park."

'The Public Has Lost Confidence'

Another Ballot Try for Pacifica

The Pacifica City Council, gloomy over rejection of their two ballot measures in the last election decided to try again in November but with a few changes.

Councilmen wanted to put the swimming pool measure, which lost by 172 votes, on the June primary election ballot.

City Atty. John Sherman said they must wait at least six months before they may repeat a general obligation bond vote.

One of Mayor Aubrey Lumley's three alternatives involved increasing the tax-rate by 25 cents to provide funds for both an increase in salaries and an inclosed swimming pool.

The winning proposal on the salary issue came from the audience. Vicki Trujillo of 179 Loree Lane, said she "would not like to see the increase of salaries put on the whims of the people. When they get a 'no' vote, it can be very demoralizing. Pay them first — then decide what services we can afford to keep."

Councilman Stan Farber agreed.

"I don't think it will ever be possible," he declared, "to get people to vote to raise city employes' salaries. If you ask them to pay 25 cents more an hour to the man in the water quality plant, they'd say no. If you ask them to rehire three firemen who've just been fired for lack of funds, then they'd say yes."

Emory Lebonville, president of the Sharp Park Improvement Club, agreed with Trujillo.

"The public has lost confidence in many areas of politics. A ballot proposal must be specific in how the money will be spent. We'd rather see the funds for salary increases allocated from the budget first, and then other programs considered."

Councilwoman Janice Fulford charged that not enough of an effort was made to sell the tax increase.

"What do you have to sell?" Farber retorted. "I say that if you negotiate fairly and give the pay raise, then go to the public with the facts, you'll have something to sell."

Farber then moved to continue to negotiate with the city employes in good faith. Once an agreement is reached, and the city budget is worked out, then whatever services need be financed, would be placed on the ballot for a tax-rate increase.

The Council, although some members expressed reluctance, approved the measure.

No action was taken on the swimming pool measure, but the councilmen seemed to agree that they were going to place the measure on the ballot again in November. Sherman said they must act 82 days before the election.

Council Asked to Reconsider Sharp Park Downtown Plan

The Pacifica City Council is being asked to give up long cherished notions of creating a downtown section in West Sharp Park.

It seems residents who live there don't like the idea.

With 37,000 residents, Pacifica is probably the biggest city in the county without a downtown section. This is because it was originally an area of four scattered villages and five unincorporated subdivisions along seven miles of the Pacific coast, when the residents voted to incorporate 16 years ago.

The most developed village was Sharp Park, so that area took on some of the functions of a downtown district. However, construction on the Coast Highway wiped out much of the business district a few years ago.

In 1969 a General Plan was drawn up for the year 1990 designating Sharp Park for further development.

An ambitious plan, it called for a 1500-foot recreational pier with restaurants and shops at its end, a 2000-foot long pedestrian boardwalk along the beach, and a pedestrian mall linking the pier with Eureka Square, acorss the freeway.

"Lining the pedestrian mall on Salada Avenue should be attractive shops oriented primarily to the tourist or visitor to the city, backed up by new motels, hotels and offices.

The remaining portions of Sharp Park should be redeveloped residentially at a highdensity to provide an immediate support population for the adjoining facilities and also to take full advantage of the unique location that is easily accessible.

This is the plan the Sharp Park Improvement Council is now asking the city to abandon.

The SPIC is asking that all the area now zoned R-3 — apartment house — Be dezoned to R-2 — duplexes. This would include virtually all the present residential area.

West Sharp Park has three long north-south streets — Beach Boulevard, whose west edge is crumbling into the ocean, Francisco Boulevard which doubles as a freeway frontage road and Palmetto Avenue, running through the middle of Sharp Park. Both Francisco and Palmetto are spotted with small businesses.

The present commercial strip zoning of the two streets as proposed by the SPIC would be changed to "nodules" of businesses, interspersed with future duplex homes, so that they would not have the business strip look.

The proposal shows no offices, no shopping malls, and no motels — just duplex homes.

West Sharp Park, according to the SPIC proposal, "will serve to provide needed low and middle income housing stock for Pacifica, so that each household, regardless of economic, racial, ethnic or age characteristics, is provided a reasonable choice of neighborhood location.

"Maintenance of the neighborhood as a basically low-density area will help realize a desirable goal of limited growth for Pacifica."

The area currently has just over a thousand residents. Perhaps half of them reside in apartments and the other half reside in homes built one by one over the past 70 years.

The area has over 160 school age children. It also has many older citizens who have retired in homes by the sea.

The SPIC's report had many proposals for improving the area without replacing any residents. These include effecting street improvement projects, a code enforcement program, and seeking funding for rehabilitation of homes, low-interest loan programs for rehabilitation, and neighborhood improvement programs. They ask Historical Landmark designation for several properties, as well as a Landmark Tree ordinance.

Another group, composed of residents who have purchased property in Sharp Park and are holding it for investment purposes has not yet presented a proposal.

There is little doubt the SPIC proposal has a greater chance of winning approval now than it did a few weeks ago. Two councilmen have been elected who share the SPIC opposition to further development — Sid Lorvan and Janice Fulford.

Local Music Students Awarded at Festival

It is surprising with all the effort that is going into the fund raising for Hawaii of the Serramonte High Concert Band that the students have time for much else, but it seems they do.

A large group of Serramonte music students traveled to San Rafael High School for the California Music Educators' Solo-Ensemble Festival March 10.

Receiving the highest honor, that of a Command Performance, were flute soloists Pam McNeil and Julie McKenzie; piano soloist, Paul Zawilski; vocal soloist, Shawn Whiteman; and a flute octet featuring Miss McNeil, Miss McKenzie, Angie Pereira, Marsha Aronovsky, Marina Karapiet, Cathy Chow, Janice Lewbin, and Diane Bashaw.

Receiving superior ratings were a flute duet by Miss Lewbin and Miss McKenzie; a vocal solo by Zawilski; a piano solo by Lynn McNeil; a bass clarinet duet by Lori Kaplan and Jennifer McNeil; a saxaphone quartet consisting of Warren Dale, David Kaplan, Ken Koch and Joyce Boghosian; a flute solo by Miss Lewbin; and a woodwind trio featuring flute, Miss Lewbin, oboe, Peter Zawilski, and bass clarinet, Miss McNeil.

Receiving excellent ratings were vocal solos by Margaret Hetzer and Larry Chinelli; an oboe solo by Peter Zawilski; a flute duet by Marsha and Susan Aronovsky; and a saxaphone duet by Steve Steinberg and Joyce Boghosian.

These artists entertained their parents and friends at an informal concert in the Serramonte High Little Theater prior to their Festival performances.

Twins Club Meet Set

Coastside Mothers of Twins Club will hold their regular monthly meeting March 21, at 8 p.m. at the San Bruno Public Library Conference Room.

On the agenda, is voting for the three delegates who will attend the 14th annual convention of the National Organization of Mothers of Twins Clubs, in San Diego, July 23-27. The program will be a Fun and Games Night.

Later this month, members will be working on napkin rings to be used at the Lumber Jack Breakfast, hostessed by the Northern California Association of Mothers of Twins Clubs, at the national convention.

All mothers with a multiple birth are invited to attend. For more information contact, membership chairwoman Cookie Alfaro, 756.9188.

Joint Meet On Lands

San Bruno City Manager Gerald Minford last week was instructed to set up a meeting with Pacifica, where council and planning subcommittees of the two cities can discuss their positions on the sphere of influence of San Francisco Jail lands and Coast Guard property.

Both cities have submitted studies to the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) citing reasons why, should the situation arise, the parcels ought to be in control of their jurisdiction, instead of with the neighboring city.

It is agreed that both cities desire low density for the acreage in question, which appears to be about the only point they unanimously agree on.

LAFCO, after studying both positions, must make any final sphere of influence determination.

Taking the Fear Out of Hospitals

"I am afraid the tests performed so far are inconclusive Mr. Jones; you will need to be hospitalized for a few days so that more extensive tests may be performed."

No one knows what reaction these words will provoke in any one individual, but let's face it: no one looks forward to hospitalization. Because of this, Mary's Help Hospital, Daly City, has implemented a program to alleviate some of the fears patients may have about their hospital stay.

It's called the Patient Representative System, and first reactions to it have been very positive, according to Frank Hudson, business manager.

Eight women from the Admitting and Business Offices at Mary's Help were recently named Patient Representatives. Their job, is to bridge the information gap on hospitalization for patients.

Here is how the system works.:

When a physician decides one of his patients must be hospitalized, his secretary calls Mary's Help Hospital to reserve a room and set a date for admission. A copy of the reservation is forwarded to the representative assigned to the patient.

Within 24 hours, the representative has telephoned the patient to introduce herself, to gather some necessary pre-admission information, and to set a specific time for the patient's admission. The representative gives that patient her telephone number and encourages the patient to call if any questions arise.

On the day of admission, the patient arrives at the hospital and is greeted by the admitting receptionist. The receptionist summons the patient's representative and the two meet in person.

The Patient Representative orients the patient to hospital routine, explaining about the various lab and x-ray procedures which will be performed, and a volunteer escorts the patient to the areas for testing. The patient representative answers any questions the patient may have about hospital costs, insurance and billing. Finally, the patient representative or a volunteer escorts the patient to his room and helps him get settled.

Throughout the patient's stay at Mary's Help Hospital, the patient representative is an advisor, counselor and friend. The representatives try to visit "their" patient at least one time during the patient's stay. The patient representative helps with all non-clinical difficulties — financial, social or personal — the patient may have during hospitalization, at the time of discharge and after hospitalization.

One-to-one contact with patients is the goal of the patient representative system, according to Hudson.

Library Friends to Review Cookbooks

Cookbooks geared to conserving energy and for special diets and books on how to buy food will be reviewed by Mrs. Louise Fletcher, San Francisco Division Home Economist for the Pacific Gas and Electric Co., for The Friends of the Daly City Library, March 28, at 10 a.m. in the Coral Room of the Westlake Branch Library.

Mrs. Fletcher, a resident of San Mateo County, is remembered for her review for The Friends last year. She also demonstrates and teaches, with an emphasis at the present time on energy conservation, for large audiences and for schools in the area.

She is a home economics graduate of Iowa State University and has done additional work at Arizona State College and San Francisco State University.

The books which Mrs. Fletcher will present will include David and Nikki Goldbeck's "The Supermarket Handbook"; Kay Beauchamp Heiss and C. Gordon Heiss' "Eat to Your Heart's Content," a low cholesterol gourmet cookbook; Collin H. Dong, M.D., and Jane Banks' "The Arthritics Cookbook"; Joe Carcione's, "The Greengrocer, The Consumers' Guide to Fruits and Vegetables"; Gertrude Harris' "Manna, Foods of the Frontier"; and Ruth Hertzberg, Beatrice Vaughn, and Janet Greene's "Putting Foods By," which is claimed to be the best — complete — of old and new ways to preserve food right (from canning, freezing, jelly-making, pickling, to smoking, drying, even root-cellaring) with recipes for using it.

Hospitality Chairwoman Elvera Sunnell, assisted by Mmes. Klaus Tschorsnig and Lloyd Wilson, will be in charge of a coffee hour preceding the review.

A no-host luncheon at The Skyliner Restaurant honoring Mrs. Fletcher following the program has been arranged by Mrs. H. C. Kincaid, book review chairwoman. Reservations for the luncheon may be made at the review.

The review will be offered as a community service. The public is invited to attend.

Writers Class Is Scheduled

Jefferson Adult Division will offer a Writers Workshop — a forum including professional writers, beginning writers, and writers who enjoy helping writers develop.

The class meets Wednesdays at 7 p.m. at Westmoor High School, starting March 20.

The workshop consists largely of reading and working with material brought in by members.

Band Benefit Chairwoman

Mrs. Joseph Lewbin is the Serramonte Concert Band parent chairwoman for the Farrell's Ice Cream Certificate sale.

Mrs. Lewbin is organizing sale of the certificates in certain specific public locations in Daly City to help finance the band's trip to Hawaii.

Students Named in PG&E Scholarships

Eleven high school seniors in Pacific Gas and Electric Company's San Francisco division have been selected as semifinalists in the company's annual $64,000 college scholarship program, John H. Black, division manager announced.

Their selection was based on outstanding scholastic and community service records. They are among more than 4,000 applicants from PG&E's Northern and Central California service area.

The students are among 160 semifinalists competing for 16 four-year scholarships of $4,000 each, according to Dr. David B. Stewart, director of PG&E's educational activities.

He said 12 scholarships will be awarded according to geographical areas. Two will go to high school seniors who have advanced despite social and economic handicaps and two awards have been set aside for children of PG&E employes.

Each of the 32-runners-up in the program will receive a one-time $500 scholarship, Dr. Stewart said.

Groups of 10 semifinalists for each of the geographic area scholarships will be narrowed to three in judging by panels of local civic leaders. Candidates in region-wide competition for the special recognition and employe scholarships will be interviewed in San Francisco. One of each three finalists will be awarded a scholarship after final judging in San Francisco in late May.

Students in competition as semifinalists for the regional award in PG&E's San Francisco division are local students: Ann V. Edminster, Pacifica, Terra Nova High School; Rush C. Mankert, Daly City, Serramonte High School; Cynthia L. Howe, Pacifica, Ocean High School; Robert J. Westbert, Jr., Pacifica, Terra Nova High School.

Catherin R. Tassone, San Francisco, St. Paul High School, is in competition for one of two scholarships to be awarded to the sons and daughters of PG&E employes.

PG&E's scholarship program was established in 1967 in memory of its late board chairman James B. Black, who in his lifetime inspired many funding efforts in support of higher education. Since its inception the program has awarded 101 scholarships to outstanding high school students.

Legal Questions on Carpool Arrangements

By LORENE BEASLEY
Editor BBB Barometer

Two questions in particular are being asked concerning the local status of drivers who are involved in carpool arrangements.

One: is a carpool ever regulated as a public utility? Two: is the liability of a carpool driver different from a driver under other circumstances?

The circumstances involved determine whether a carpool arrangement is ever liable as a utility, i.e., a common carrier for hire.

The dividing line lies between the rights of a citizen to travel and transport his property on the highways and, the right and privilege of a person who uses the highway for a place of business or for private gain.

Recent carpool arrangements, which have been made to meet the energy crisis and in which a nominal sum is charged or where the driving and expenses are shared among the members, do not constitute the sort of carriage that subjects the driver or drivers to regulation as a carrier for hire.

However, the driver who makes unreasonable profits and who places himself in competition with regularly scheduled transit operations might conceivably be subject to regulation as a public utility.

State laws covering the liability of a carpool driver vary. Thirty-four states have "guests statutes" which limit the liability of a driver transporting a guest, when the guest is injured, to those instances where a driver is grossly negligent.

Some states define a guest as a non-paying passenger. Other states exclude a person who pays for his ride from the definition of a guest even though the status may not make the distinction. The general tendency is for courts to rule that paying carpool riders are not guests. A carpool driver is therefore liable for ordinary as well as gross negligence.

Most insurance companies realize that in many carpool arrangements passengers pay money to the driver, and, because the insurance company's liability increases, many automobile liability insurance policies contain clauses exempting the insurance company from liability if the insured vehicle is used to carry passengers for a "charge," "hire," "compensation," or "payment."

The Better Business Bureau suggests that drivers involved in carpools check with their insurance agents to determine the extent of their coverage. Some companies do not invoke the exclusionary clause. A simple and inexpensive addition to the insurance policy may be had to protect the driver.

YWCA Sets Lecture Concerning Women

The YWCA is sponsoring an eight-week lecture and discussion on woman — her biology and background, history, socialization and change.

Topics covered during the classes will include the role religion has played in the history of women, what the American frontier life meant and the feminist movement and the drive for equal rights.

Also discussed will be the socialization of children and the new conception of marriage.

Classes will be held Thursday mornings from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. beginning April 4.

There will be a charge of $8 for the eight-weeks. Kathleen Kennedy of Millbrae will instruct the course held at The Citizens Savings and Loan Association Conference Room, 475 San Mateo Ave., San Bruno.

For details contact the YWCA office, 560 El Camino Real, San Bruno, or call 588-7366.

Lorraine Heath

Mrs. Frank Lawson is hoping that today's Day at the Races, being sponsored by the members of the Mary's Help Hospital Guild, will be a "real winner" for the hospital pledge fund.

The annual event, chaired this year by Mrs. Lawson and Mrs. Frank Falconi, is one of the highlights of the spring season for guild faithful. Members traditionally round up friends and relatives and make individual party groups within the over-all assembly and spend the day at Golden Gate Fields.

While this is a conventional type of "fun activity" many guild members have a lot of "fun" and get a nice happy feeling from another of the guild's programs. Each morning, for the past two years, guild members make telecare calls to lonely shut-ins.

Volunteer work from 9 a.m. until 9:30 a.m. calling people who have little contact with the world beyond their doorsteps. The volunteer checks the person's health status, inquiries as to any emergency needs and chats a little to help relieve the bleakness of someone's solitary life. Should no one answer the telephone's ring then the volunteer sets in motion the machinery to have an on site check made to be sure that the shut-in is not in serious difficulty.

It is a worthwhile program and one that offers rewards that can not be equaled to the volunteer who feels that she is filing a vital role.

Mrs. Pat Lindsay is in charge of the program and she is always on the look out for volunteers to serve as alternates to serve when regular members of the telecare team are on vacation or ill. If you would like to help, call Mrs. Lindsay at 586-8890.

LIAISON OFFICERS for the San Francisco Bay Council, Girl Scouts will meet tomorrow from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. to coordinate troop planning and hear reports on district activities.

A source of pleasure for all adult scouters is the association's excellent organization for the adult fund raising campaign underway this month.

Daly City's Al Schwarzbach is the council fund raising chairman, in charge of Marin, San Francisco and San Mateo Counties, and he has selected Richard H. McBride, assistant vice president and manager of the Crocker Bank in Serramonte, to be the local fund raising chairman.

McBride has a successful history in this type of position. He was the council treasurer of Tierra del Oro council in the Sacramento Valley and Daly City Council people are overjoyed to get such an experienced scouter to serve on their team.

In addition to the appointment of McBride, the council has created a new financial post and Mrs. Margaret Kachur will be the first to serve as Daly City Assistant Association chairwoman for finance.

THERE IS STILL time for Mothers and Sons from Riordan High School to make reservations for the communion breakfast to be held Sunday at Riordan High School.

The Mass will be celebrated at 9 a.m. with the breakfast to follow in Chaminade Hall. Tickets, costing $2 per person may be reserved by calling Mrs. Jane Picone, 755-9151.

There is considerable activity going on at Riordan these days as the school gears up for all the silver anniversary programs.

The Silver Anniversary Gala will be a dinner-dance in the Grand Ballroom of the St. Francis Hotel April 20.

Mrs. Albert Bucci, publicity chairwoman for the party, lists Mrs. Edward Fennelley as the general chairman of the festive event. Assisting Mrs. Fennelley are Mrs. Michael Dudley, the junior past president of the Riordan Guild and Sil Cavilini, a past president of the Riordan club.

Arrangements have been made to have a special city and state proclamation made during the gala. State Senator Milton Marks will represent Governor Ronald Reagan and San Francisco Supervisor Ron Pelosi will represent Mayor Joseph Alioto during the presentation ceremonies. Archbishop Joseph McGucken will be the evening's special guest.

Daly City's Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Murphy are in charge of the reservations and may be contacted by calling 755-0178. Tickets for the dinner dance will cover the cost of wine with dinner and dancing to the music of Maury Wolohan. The price per person will be $17.50.

MEMBERS OF the Fifty Plus Club will meet March 26, at 7:45 p.m. to see pictures of club outings taken by Cliff DiFranco.

Members are invited to bring along friends and relatives to see this collection of lovely slides. For additional information about the Fifty Plus group, call Mrs. Edna Laurel Calhan, 344-4757.

NELL NORTON

Good morning, good cooks.

Recently my neighbor and I joined forces to prepare a dessert for a bridge party. It was fun to work together on these apple dumplings and even more fun when they were greeted with such praise. Since the guests wanted the recipe and it's such a goodie, this is the perfect time to share it with all you good cooks.

LOUISE'S APPLE DUMPLINGS

6 baking apples, medium size
Baking Powder Biscuit Recipe
2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
7 Tablespoons shortening
½ cup milk

Sift the two cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder and one teaspoon salt together into mixing bowl, cut in the seven tablespoons shortening. Add the one-half cup milk and mix quickly. Knead for a few seconds on a lightly floured board. Roll dough into a rectangle one-eighth inch thick. Cut into six squares.

Wash and core the six apples and place one in the center of each square of pastry. Fill the center with the following mixture:

FILLING

2 Tablespoons margarine, melted
½ cup sugar
2 Tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Melt the two tablespoons margarine in a small saucepan. Add the half cup sugar, two tablespoons lemon juice, fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon and fourth teaspoon nutmeg. Mix well. Spoon into the centers of apples.

Now that you have the filling in the apples bring the four corners together at the top. Moisten edges and pinch together to hold in place.

Grease a 9x13-inch shallow baking pan and place the dumplings therein. Bake at 450-degrees for 10 minutes. Lower oven heat to 350-degrees and bake 40 minutes longer.

During the baking time baste the dumplings with the following syrup about four times. This gives them a beautiful brown glaze.

SYRUP

½ cup white syrup
¼ cup water
3 tablespoons margarine, melted

Melt the three tablespoons margarine in a small saucepan, add the fourth cup water and half cup syrup and heat.

Serve dumplings warm or cold, plain or with lemon or vanilla sauce.

VANILLA SAUCE

1 cup sugar
2 Tablespoons cornstarch
2 cups boiling water
4 Tablespoons butter
Few grains salt
2 teaspoons vanilla

Mix the one cup sugar with the two tablespoons cornstarch and dash of salt. Add the two cups boiling water gradually, stirring constantly. Boil 5 minutes. Remove from heat and add the four Tablespoons butter and two teaspoons vanilla. Makes two cups. Serve hot.

An added thought about making apple dumplings. I realize that the length of the recipe and the different mixtures make it sound rather difficult. It is really an easy recipe. You will find as you wrap the dough around the apples that you can pull it and patch it and it will still come out fine.

Don't use large apples the first time. This way you will be sure to have enough pastry to handle easily. After you've made the dumplings a couple of times you'll become more expert and confident and know how to "stretch the material" to fit larger apples.

NOTE

In the recipe last week for Irish Trifle one line was left out of the method. Right after the line reading, "Beat the egg white until stiff and add the remaining tablespoon sugar.", the next line is . . . Fold egg white into whipped cream and spread over chilled trifle.

A Storyteller Writes About Her World

By MICHELLE CARTER

Ruth Freeman Solomon has a thousand stories to tell. What good fortune that she also can write.

The best-selling author of two novels about pre-revolutionary Russia, Mrs. Solomon now is promoting her recently released novel, "The Ultimate Triumph," (Putnam, $8.95). This book is a fictionalized version of the world of psychiatry and the men and women who people it.

Over mugs of hot coffee in the sunlit, greenery-filled kitchen of her Sea Cliff home in San Francisco, Ruth Solomon indulged in the story telling that she obviously loves — this time the story was her own.

Born in Russia of Jewish parentage, she emigrated to the United States as a child with her parents and was educated in Eastern schools. She married psychiatrist-in-training Dr. Joseph C. Solomon and traveled with him to Europe to complete his training in the restless political period before the second World War.

They lived in Vienna, the city that provides part of the setting of her latest book, and lived much of the life that the central characters of the book enjoyed.

"There really was a Cafe Edison where the American Medical Association in Vienna was headquartered, and we did live in an apartment that we called 'Das Zimmer' just as Dan and Jenny did," Mrs. Solomon explained.

"I learned long ago what every writer learns — write about what you know. It was natural to talk about the places we had been and the apartment we lived in when talking about Vienna in that period."

Her precarious woman - without - a - country status in a world about to burst into political upheaval hadn't concerned the young wife until she and her husband tried to return to the United States. She was faced with the prospect of staying on Ellis Island while she waited for an opening on the immigration lists allowing her to re-enter the country that had been her home. It took some fast thinking and a bit of deception on the part of her husband so she could leave the ship and join her parents on Long Island.

"I always thought it rather degrading to have the country of birth listed on my passport. During the Stalin years, having Russia listed as my birthplace caused a lot of difficult moments for me. Now it's not so bad."

Whether or not she has always been ready to claim her homeland, Russia has a strong literary bond with this particular native daughter. The folklore of Russia and her familiarity with the plight of the Jews in Russia form the basis of her first two novels, "The Candlesticks and the Cross" and "The Eagle and the Dove."

These books were born out of a story-telling session she had one weekend in Carmel. After hearing the tales of Russian gypsies and Jews, a publisher friend wouldn't rest until he had her under contract to write the novels. But while she was producing the first two books, this last one, "The Ultimate Triumph," is the one she's always wanted to write.

"I wanted to tell, from one point of view, a little bit of the story of psychiatry, the training required and the kind of life a dedicated psychoanalyst leads. Most lay people aren't even aware that a psychoanalyst must undergo analysis himself before he's ready to accept patients of his own."

It's a story that Ruth Solomon knows well. Her husband is clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of California Medical Center. During her husband's training days, she joined him in seminars whenever possible so she has more than a wifely knowledge of her husband's profession and the jargon of that medical specialty.

The book is sprinkled liberally with psychiatric theory and legend including Dan's encounter with Freud himself in Vienna, and she has borrowed freely from the non-fiction lives of her family and friends for the book.

So much is obviously (and admittedly) real that a reader is bound to wonder how much of Jenny is really Ruth Solomon, the author.

"I knew that many readers were going to think of me as Jenny so that's why I made her the way she was. I figured I might as well be thought of as a sexy, raving beauty. Why not?"

Mrs. Solomon emerges as something of a critic as well as a chronicler of the psychiatric profession. She makes it clear that she doesn't consider non-medical or lay therapists on the same level as psychotherapists who are medical doctors first.

"So many kinds of therapy are going on today, and lots of it is non-medical in nature. Just because a person is warm and sympathetic doesn't mean that he could deal with a severely disturbed psychopath. There's much more to it than simple compassion."

She also comments through the narrative of the book on some of the less humanitarian goals of the money-grubbing, status-seeking variety of "Park Avenue" analysts. One member of the Vienna group to which Dan Gunther, the central character of the novel, belonged, followed that route and was involved in the "psychological castration" of a fellow analyst.

The reaction from the psychiatric profession has been totally positive so far.

"I've found that professionals have responded to me and to the book in exact relationship to their feelings about psychiatry, psychoanalysis and medicine. The ones whose opinions I value have had only good things to say."

While psychiatry provided the background and the theme of the book, Mrs. Solomon's primary aim was to tell a story.

"I wanted to tell enough of a story to keep the average reader turning the pages. People read to be entertained, and I'm just a teller of tales."

When you've heard her story, it's hard to imagine her running out of material.

A Portola Valley History

Thus spoke Cicero, "To be ignornant of what happened before you were born is to be ever a child." One by one, it seems, the communities of San Mateo County are becoming aware of their history. To join the excellent histories of San Mateo County and our own history of Daly City and Colma, comes Gilbert Richards "Crossroads," which is a record of the people and events of the Redwoods of San Mateo County.

Here is the story of Portola Valley and Woodside and also of the lumbering industry that attracted men and women to the Peninsula even as the gold rush was luring thousands into other parts of California. It's a lively story about dynamic people who came to rugged hills and steep canyons and stayed to support, at times, and oppose, at times, the lumber industry, the conservationists and the sub-developers.

As Dr. Frank M. Stanger writes in the introduction, "Mr. Richards' book, will serve well to enrich the lives of those who live in the area and to stimulate interest in the backgrounds of all our Peninsula communities."

San Mateo County entered history when a "ven- turesome" band of "weary Spaniards limped southward from their valley campsite of the previous night." What an odd group! Their leader was Captain Gaspar de Portola, proud citizen of Spain who held a commission to search for a land route to Monte Rey Bay.

Accompanying Portola were 63 men and 200 horses and mules. Among the men were soldiers with long spears and priests with their round hats and heavy crosses. And they were lost. They gazed at "a vexing arm of the sea that was at once the most momentous of discoveries and, in the eyes of the expedition, no discovery at all." Little did they know that history would honor their discovery of the Bay and forget all about their failure to find Monterey.

From Spanish days, conservationists have urged the preservation of California forests. The first of these concerned people was Governor Jose Joaquin Arrillaga who in 1793 sought the help of the mission president in enforcing fire control measures.

Concern for the redwoods caused the Mexican officials of 1830 to issue a government "reglamento" that restricted the cutting of timber and imposed a duty of 10 per cent on its export. Mexican concern is witnessed in an 1834 appeal to the Assembly of Monterey that "foreigners in the Sierra Morena (redwoods) were methodically destroying the forests." Yet in 1841 the Mexican government allowed 100,000 board feet of lumber per year to be shipped overseas.

The first American to settle in the redwoods seems to have been William Smith, sometimes known as Bill — the Sawyer. As Guillermo Esmit, he married a senorita named Josepa Saeriz. The event was performed at Mission Dolores. To get there William Smith had to travel north through lands that "were teaming with savage 1grizzly bears and Indians." His trip was one of the first journeys through San Mateo County.

Following the first settler, came men who were bent on finding fame and fortune, some are described as "turbulent, unethical, vociferous." Some were "men of spirit." One is called a man "who made a compromise with the devil's disciples." Some, however, were home-seekers who are described as "solid citizens." Each made his contribution.

"Crossroads" is a fascinating book to read. The illustrations alone make it valuable. It is written with skill and with great care. As with so many other histories, reading it leaves one hungry for more information. Undoubtedly. Richards faced the age-old problem of sifting and cutting until he had a book of manageable size.

While this cutting tends to make choppy histories, Richard's book is far more than a scissors and paste production. With "Crossroads" he adds to his many contributions as a writer, painter and lecturer.

Let us hope it will urge the productions of histories that tell of the events that made the cities and towns of California. Furthermore, let us hope that it will be widely read.

OUR LADY OF PERPETUAL Help School in Daly City is conducting a paper drive, the proceeds of which will be used to plant more trees on the hillside behind the school. Shown planting an evergreen are students John Ferrari and Lawanda Allen and OLPH sixth grade teacher Tim Pacelli. Call the school of details on the paper drive.

Alumni Banquet

DID IT AGAIN, fans. Went to the annual Mission High School Athletic Alumni banquet, which is where I first learned the meaning of the word masochistic. Which also explains why I keep returning. Where does it get me, after all, except constant reminders that I had a lousy arm and couldn't catch pop flies, and a hangover. The latter of which is pretty tough to acquire on two scotches and water and three Calsos, which is also a hint as to how my constitution has deteriorated in direct proportion to my common sense.

But it could have been worse. Eight or 10 years ago (preciseness melts away after 15 or 20 such affairs) my attendance could have landed me in jail.

I was reminded of this when an old Daly City inhabitant, Ed Steinway, showed up for the first time since that fateful evening when he helped us empty out the Red Garter, one of the few night time establishments left in North Beach where the entertainers wear something for their suspenders to hold up.

Although Steinway, who once hit over .500 for Mission in the San Francisco prep baseball league, will forever deny it, he started it all.

It all started when a group of about 20 of us decided to visit the Garter to cheer on Harry Higgins and his Living Banjo. Harry, being an old teammate who once threw the curve ball often enough to make All City, was delighted to see us arrive and even more delighted to see us depart.

There we were, all quietly singing the Mission fight song to the tune of "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover," when a Cal rugby player doubling as a waiter either spilled beer on Steinway, or vice-versa. Some words were spoken, whereupon an ex All City halfback named Pete Hupke and two former baseball players, Jim Custodio and Alex Petropulos, and I broke fast for the protective plank of the bar. We had no sooner managed to order fresh beers when we noticed a tall waiter having his nose broken by a local plumber, whose name shall go unmentioned, the rugby player being swung on by a Russian catcher, and Steinway, having suddenly become a .250 hitter (one if four punches landed), drinking up all the unattended beer of the combatants.

THE NEXT few minutes were a blur of sounds and sights not too pleasant as we made our way out to the street just in time to hear police sirens. We joined many other innocent by-standers, having managed to empty the Garter on a weekend for probably the first time in its history. Every Mission alum made a clean getaway. But we never again saw Hupke, Custodio, Petropulos, the Russian or Steinway, at another alumni gathering, until Steinway made his comeback at the 1974 version, still denying his complicity in the affair.

On the more positive side, Ed, I am happy to report, having sewed his wild oats, is now as suave and sophisticated as the rest of us, and was among one of many long-time stay-aways who attended to honor George Wolfman, the former Mission and UC Berkeley baseball coach who was being feted on the silver anniversary of the Athletic Alumni Association which he founded with a small gathering of baseball players feasting on hot dogs and beans in the school cafeteria.

It was a surprise for Wolfman, who not only was unaware that the whole shebang would be in his honor, but also didn't know that as he was being introduced, his wife and three sons, along with their wives, would be ushered into the room. At that point I'm sure that George was wishing that he hadn't spent quite so much time at the bar before dinner; but suddenly being confronted by one's family at a stag dinner is always a sobering experience, and George straightened out in time to deliver a fine off-the-cuff talk in which he essentially declared that he wouldn't have done anything in his career had it not been for the guys out in front who had responded so often when he flashed them the hit signal.

San Francisco Supervisor Al "Snooky" Nelder, former infielder and Chief of Police, presented George with an official plaque from the city acknowledging his inspirational work with youngsters over the years, and Mission principal Ted Scourkes informed him that the Alumni Association had established a scholarship fund in his name.

IT WAS A LONG over-due honor for Wolfman, who, now retired from coaching, deserves the peace and tranquility that comes from running the expanded acvertising business which he established as a moonlighting occupation when he was at Mission.

After the official ceremonies, it was business as usual, for me, becoming reacquainted with all the former Missionites now living in the circulation areas of this newspaper: Ron Root, George Zucca, Lloyd Dickey, Gene Gavighio, Wimpy Perry, Jim Kazarian, Ray Santiago, Frank Maribella, Joe Montorosso, Lefty Bob Collins, Tony "Nunk" Ballestrasse, Steve Maxatopoulis, et al.

Ballestrasse and Max (we abbreviate so as not to spell his name wrong twice) brought their sons, Tony and Steve, jrs., who attend Terra Nova and Crestmoor, respectively.

Ballestrasse, Sr., regaled us with his tales of bailbondsmanship, while Steve, Sr., a San Francisco homicide inspector on a month's leave because of gimpy knees, reminisced about how yours truly was one of the first to do a number on one of those bad knees during a semi-pro game at Big Rec.

I pleaded extenuating circumstances, reminding Steve that I represented the winning run in the last inning of a tight ball game, and that if I hadn't cut him down sliding into third base, my manager, Joe Gaggero, probably would have crippled ME.

I will never forget the look in Steve's eyes when he charged me that day, bent on mayhem. I stood up, brushed myself off, noticed his slowed advance due to the knee injury, called a quick time-out, and sprinted for the safety of our bench. It wasn't the bravest thing I ever did, but was one of the smartest decisions I ever made.

Two of the real old-timers we enjoyed seeing were Glenn Haas, who once coached Mission to 10 straight soccer championships and who still looks as young as when he was my father's PE teacher at Mission, and Al Fioresi, the old Pacific Coast League umpire who was attending his first Mission alumni gathering.

Fioresi, who once lived around the corner from us in the Portola district, is now retired and playing bit parts on the television show, "Streets of San Francisco." He was with Johnny Verducci, who also frequently appears on the same program.

Al reminded me of the softball games we used to play at Portola Playground after dinner during long summers between the Kids and the Old Men, and how the Old Men always beat us with their power and moxie. That isn't quite how I remember it, but my father, who used to play shortstop alongside hot sacker Fioresi, concurs with Al's version of the story, so I'll concede the point until I can turn up an old scorebook or two.

Well, that was our 25th Mission High School Athletic Alumni banquet. There were many more people and many more stories, but there isn't much more space. Which is probably a blessing for the reader, unless he is a Mission alumnus . . . and who isn't?

Annual One-on-One tournament

Williams Nips Serramonte's Jurand

By CHRISTOPHER STAVE
Post Sports Wrtier

Woodside High was the basketball equivalent of the old country store Friday night — a meeting place, a center for gossip.

It was also the scene for the second annual Woodside One-on-One tournament, one of the few local athletic events that almost everyone enjoys.

Coaches meet and talk (and look around for possible prospects) and a few old grads drop back to see how their former comrades are doing.

There are enough surprises to please the crowd — the semi-finals pitted two Mid-Peninsula League players (not too shocking) against two relatively unheralded North Peninsula League entries (which was a mild eyebrow-raiser).

The eventual champion, Hillsdale senior Rod Williams, was tight — the competition was, in a way, the farewell to a great prep career. Also the CCS All-Star game in June remains, and he'll be out of school by then.

But most everybody else was loose. One player complained of the adverse effect of beer on his style.

There were some upsets. Every game Half Moon Bay's Rich Loveman played was an upset, and he got all the way to the semifinals. "Does he always go to the basket that well?" asked one coach.

Loveman bounced Todd Walker of Cubberley, the best scorer in the SPAL this year, and then edged Carlmont's Bruce Herron, who had earlier upset WCAL Player of the Year Elmer Love.

Williams hadn't expected to meet Loveman in the semis. "I never heard of the guy," he said. Williams won 20-10, but Loveman got some well-deserved applause.

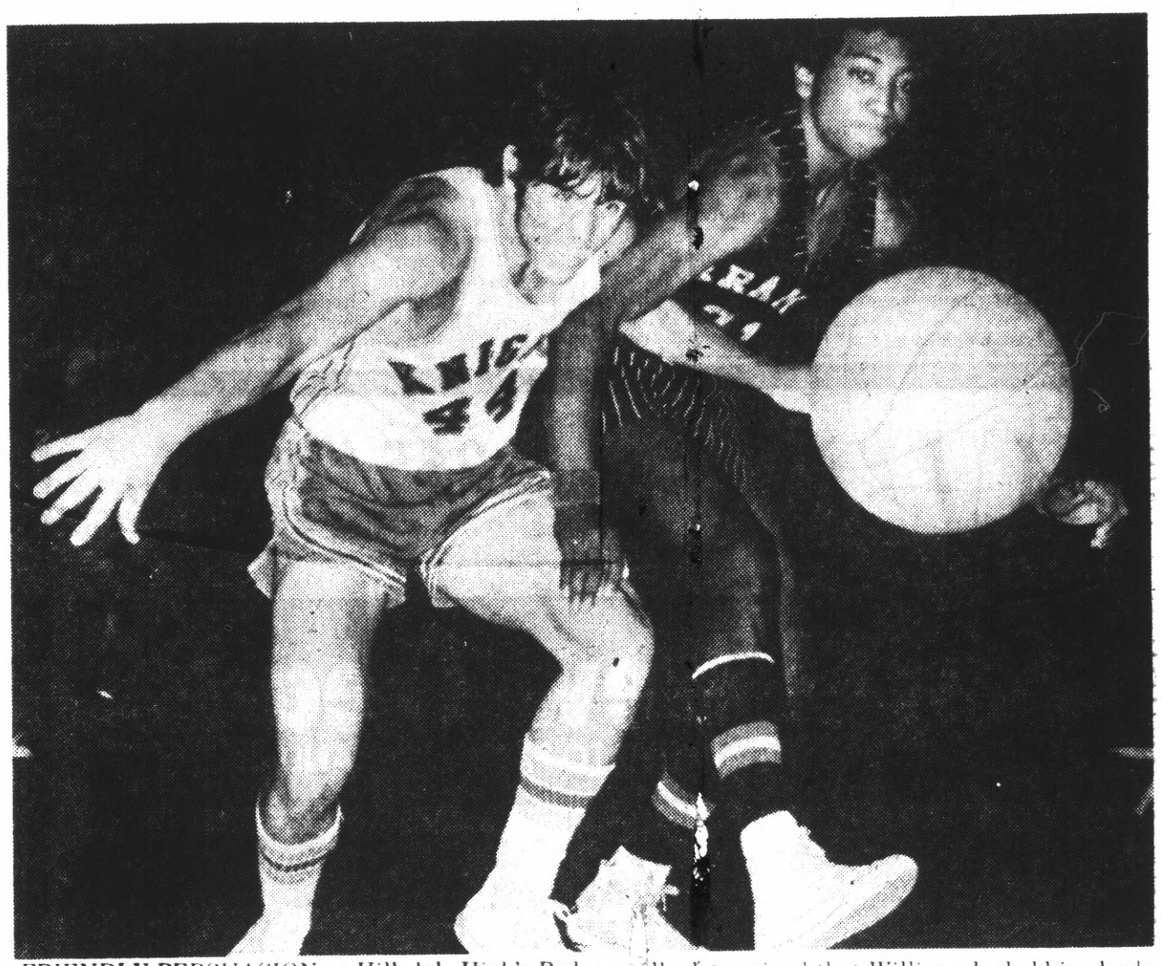
Meanwhile, Serramonte's Pete Jurand had, with a seemingly effortless style, survived close games with Hillsdale's Mike Arburn and Mitty's Rick Porras to make the semis against Capuchino's Frank Denucci.

Denucci, the shortest player in the semis at 6-0, made his way up the ladder by shooting better from outside than anyone else. But Jurand won the semi, 20-14. Denucci beat Loveman 20-11 for third place.

Against Jurand, Williams missed a layup or two which would ordinarily have been automatic, but Jurand had gone cold and didn't hit on numerous shots from the circle. Williams won 20-14.

Last year's finalists, Tom Flavin and Don Weaver, back from the college wars, dropped in for a look. "I wish I was out there," said Flavin. Everybody agreed — it was all good fun.

Williams now has college ball to think about. He has "about seven trips lined up" to different campuses.



FRIENDLY PERSUASION — Hillsdale High's Rod Williams (44) is bent on getting a loose ball in the finals of the Woodside One-on-One Tournament Friday night, and Serramonte's Pete Jurand is equally determined that Williams be held in check. Williams finally capped his high school career with a 20-14 win.

Trojans Continue Track Streak; CSM Beaten

Skyline College has already completed a home dual meet season while College of San Mateo is ready for a debut on its new Tartan track today.

The two local community colleges were on opposite ends of lop-sided dual scores Thursday — Skyline toppling Cabrillo 103-41 in a Coast meet and CSM falling 102-25 at powerful Laney.

Skyline's win kept the Trojans pertect for the season at 6-0 — going over the 100-point mark in all of their dual and triangulars so far. Skyline's overall win streak, including a Camino Norte Conference championship last year, is now 16.

Laney was at its awesome best on its own track, winning every running event as state 880 champ James Robinson ran a national JC season best of 1:52.8. CSM's only win came in the discus, an event the Bulldogs swept behind Phil Williamson's 140-foot toss.

Skyline hardly needed its bests to run away from Cabrillo. One school record was broken. Frosh Tony Fotinos from St. Ignatius knocked 3.5 seconds off his week-old mile mark with a 4:27.0 time.

Trojan decathlon prospect Tom Swartzell was the iron man of the meet with wins in the javelin (153-0) and shot (44-6), second in the high hurdles (15.4) behind Ike Allmond (15.0), and thirds in the 440 intermediates (59.8) behind Jim Wyatt's excellent 54.2 and Allmond's 55.8 pluys the high jump (5-6) — won by Frank Byndloss at 6-1. Swartzell, a soph from South San Francisco, also ran on Skyline's winning mile relay team, which was anchored by Wyatt in 50.9.

CSM Loses

When the Golden Gate Conference split the baseball season into halves, with the champion each half to play off for the league title, it looked like a move to hurt College of San Mateo, the dominant team in the league the last several years.

Says CSM coach John Noce, "I was afraid it could mean the team with the best record — us — could lose the conference championship. Now, as it turns out, the new rule might help us."

CSM lost its second GGC game of the campaign Saturday at Laney, 3-1, and went into a second place tie with Laney at 4-2, behind unbeaten Chabot.

It's quite possible the Bulldogs will fail to catch Chabot in the first half of the season — but now escape is offered by the second half.

The Bulldogs' spotty hitting was a culprit again Saturday. In the first meeting with Laney this year, CSM got 15 hits off Laney hurler John Bass. Saturday Bass scattered five hits. CSM never had more than one base runner in any inning.

Regents Hand SSF Spikers Delayed Loss

It was almost expected — and the expected happened.

South San Francisco High's track team dropped its first home dual meet since 1968 Friday in a delayed contest against Serramonte.

The Warriors needed to sweep the pole vault — last event held over from Thursday — to pull it out, but Serramonte's Chavez leaped 10 feet to win.

Claude Gregory and Tom Bildhauer of South City managed 9-6, but Serramonte won the meet 71-62.

SSF's Charles Jackson took the freshman pole vault at nine feet, but the Warrior frosh succumbed 75-59.

SSF, Inglewood Officials Meet

Conference on Noise Control

Frank Mammini, South San Francisco City Councilman, has returned from Inglewood where he was invited to explain how South San Francisco has managed to have its voice effectively heard by the management of the San Francisco International Airport.

Inglewood officials have tried for the past five years to influence landing and take off procedures in order to reduce the amount of jet noise over their City. Until recently their success has been very limited. South San Francisco, on the other hand, has had success in encouraging major changes in take off patterns, substantially reducing the amount of jet noise over South San Francisco, according to Mammini.

"Make sure your facts are absolutely accurate and present them to those who have the authority to make changes," instructed Mammini.

Mammini conferred with Inglewood City Councilman Curtis R. Tucker on ways to build the national effort to reduce jet noise. Mammini is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Organization to Insure a Sound Controlled Environment (NOISE), the only national organization devoted exclusively to jet noise pollution.

"Very few areas have made the progress South San Francisco has in reducing jet noise," said Tucker. "But we have all made some progress, generally working alone or with our neighbors around an airport. The progress we make in the future must come on a national level, with all of us working together.

While in Inglewood, Mammini examined the city's noise monitoring system — a series of microphones placed under the flight patterns that constantly pick up and record jet noise at all hours.

"This data will be invaluable in proving to congress just how much noise we have around major airports," said Mammini. "It may force the one thing all of us have been fighting for, retrofitting jet engines.

30 Per Cent Drop in Local Building Fees

Only one building permit for a new building was issued in Pacifica in January — that for a restroom.

There were no permits issued to build any stores, houses, duplexes or apartments — in a city which often leads the North County in construction.

The situation appears to be a consequence of the Planning Commission's rejection or postponement of all new construction projects and subdivisions for most of last year, the rejection of those permits approved in 1972, by the Coastal Conservation Commission in 1973, and the rejection at the polls of the one major subdivision that was approved.

The restroom is being built at the new Frontierland Park, at a cost of $28,511.

According to Building Official Philip W. Mayo, January's $162,125 total is down over 30 per cent from January of 1973.

Cease Operation Limo Firms Told

Two North county limousine companies, Milton W. Henke Limo Service of South San Francisco, and the San Mateo County Transportation Co., doing business as AAA-OK Limousine Service, have been ordered to cease operating.

California's Public Utilities Commission ruled March 13 in San Francisco that both firms "shall cease and desist from operating as charter-party carriers of passengers."

Effective date of the order was set at 20 days after a notice of the order was served on the applicants.

The PUC ruling result from permit applications filed by Henke, and by San Mateo Transportation Company in mid-August, 1973.

During testimony before the commission, Leon Vilinskas of San Mateo County Transportation Co. appeared for that firm and Henke represented himself.

It was noted by the commission staff that both firms are so inter-related that it is difficult to determine which is which, listing identical vehicles as assets of each company, and with Henke apparently serving as operational boss of both.

The cease and desist order was based on Commission findings that both had operated as passenger carriers without Commission authority, due to inconsistencies in both applications, and lack of financial responsibility.

Crusade Chairman Is Named

Gordon L. Hough, executive vice president of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, has been named chairman of the 1974 United Bay Area Crusade campaign.

His appointment was announced this week by Bank of America president A. W. Clausen, who was elected president of the board of directors at the organization's annual meeting Feb. 28.

In 1969, Hough served as chairman of the United Way campaign in Los Angeles. Current community involvements include positions as director of the Greater San Francisco Chamber of Commerce and president of the Industry-Education Council of California.

A graduate of Stanford University with a masters in business administration, Hough and his family now reside in Hillsborough.

THE ITALIAN CATHOLIC Federation of Daly City and Colma recently presented $25 checks to Westmoor and Serramonte High Schools for the fund-raising campaigns of the school's bands. Upon presenting the checks, Mrs. Victoria Gregori (left) representing the I.C.F., noted "We sometimes overlook the good things that youngsters do and focus on all the problems. When we see something like this that is good, we should respond and support." Westmoor High School band has been invited to participation in a Disneyland Main Street March, and Serramonte High School band has been invited to the Hawaiian Music Festival. Both schools are currently conducting a campaign to raise funds. Trustee president Jane Powell, (right) on behalf of the Jefferson Union High School District, expressed her appreciation to Mrs. Gregori and the I.C.F. for their concern and support of youth activities.

Junior Livestock Expo

Steers, Heifers Coming to DC

Almost 3,000 steers, heifers, cows, lambs, ewes and hogs will be herded into the Cow Palace next month for the 28th annual Grand National Junior Livestock Exposition.

And despite the gas shortage, Darrel Chapman, Cow Palace livestock superintendent, reports that 1,893 youngsters from all over California have entered their animals in the show—250 more than last year.

The Livestock Exposition, largest of its kind in the country, will begin April 5 and last through April 9. The exhibitors, ranging in age from 9 to 19, will be competing for trophies and ribbons in categories for market steers, lambs and hogs, breeding heifers and ewes and dairy cattle.

Chapman said that judges of market and breeding stock will be looking for animals with good conformation which promise a high meat yield and not too much fat. The judges of dairy cattle, he said, will be looking for "a sharp animal; one that looks like she'll milk well and has good udders. They'll look a lot at the udders."

The boys and girls entering the livestock show are members of 4-H, Future Farmers of America and other youth development organizations. They have spent six hours and more each day preparing their animals for exhibit. For a number of youngsters, this is experience for future careers in the livestock industry.

On April 8 and 9, the market animals will go on the auction block for sale to hotels, restaurants, supermarkets and the general public. It will provide the harassed consumer with an opportunity to buy choice, freezer-ready beef at little more than $1 per pound, while rewarding the youngsters for the time and money they have invested in the animals.

Sponsored by the State of California to encourage youth development, the Junior Grand National is a full-scale junior version of the senior Grand National Show held each fall. In addition to the Livestock Exposition (April 5-9), it offers Horse Show competition in both Western and English classifications (April 11-17), and this year will again host the regional finals of the California High School Rodeo Association.

The Rodeo, which takes to the arena April 6 and 7, at 8 p.m., is the only portion of the Junior Grand National for which there is an admission charge.

Making High School a Little More Interesting

Attending high school can be a boring way to spend a day for some students, but according to Skyline College counselor Mario Lambardi, the Veysey Bill has kept many interested in continuing their education.

Assemblyman Victor Veysey authored the bill, enabling the high school junior or senior to be concurrently enrolled in high school and the local community college.

The program, implemented at Skyline two years ago, affords a number of advantages to both the student and the school and college involved.

Any student may apply for the program, but the screening process is meticulous, and approval is subject to the opinions of Lombardi and Dean of Admissions Rex Butler.

"We evaluate each transcript and recommendation we receive from the high school counselors," Lombardi said. "If we feel the student will benefit from taking college courses at this time, if he is sharp, and if his counselor approves, the application will go through," he said.

These students are not subject to special privileges, however. "We don't announce to the teachers that they have high school kids in their classes," Lombardt said. "We want every student to be treated the same."

To qualify, the student must be enrolled at his high school for a minimum of four classes a day. Dean of Men James Wyatt explained that this generates a financial advantage for the institutions involved.

"The high school district loses no money. The district receives full compensation with this type of student enrollment, as long as the student attends the high school for the minimal day," he said.

"Skyline gets the ADA (average daily attendance) generated from the state," Wyatt said.

From the student standpoint, the advantages are many. Credit from taking college courses under the Veysey Bill may be directed toward fulfilling high school graduation requirements or toward college credit after graduation.

"One three-unit course here is equal to 10 high school credits, one year of study," Wyatt said.

"It is the speed with which it proceeds. Language is the prime example," he said. "One year of college Spanish, for example, is equivalent to the first two years of high school Spanish. Spanish 2 in college equals the third year in high school.

"So, by taking 14 years of college language, the student will have completed four years of high school language," he said.

Wyatt added that "high school algebra is a one year course. Here, it takes one semester to cover the same information, the fastest it can be done."

Is it fair to throw high school students into this kind or situation?

"It would not be," Wyatt said, "if we did not take the steps we take to screen all applications. If we think for any reason that a particular student would not be a viable choice, we reject the request," he said.

Some of the more popular courses taken by the Veysey students have been scheduled by the college at hours more favorable to their daily schedules.

Wyatt said, "Certain courses such as calculus and cosmetology, things taken in greater numbers, are scheduled in the morning, in the afternoon or at night.

"Calculus is offered at 8 a.m. The high school student can come up here for the class and be back at school for second period," he said. "Or, they can go to school in the morning and take the class in the afternoon."

The student who has met most or all of his requirements for graduation by the end of the junior year, has the option to come to Skyline at night.

According to Wyatt, "Subjects like oceanography and marine biology, offered during the day, are held three days a week. If it's taken at night, it means only one trip to the college," he said.

"The high school student who works in the afternoon goes to school from 8-12 in the morning, works a few hours and comes up here at night for one or two classes," he said.

Although the curriculum is extensive for Veysey students, they are limited to the kinds of classes they may take. Wyatt and Lombardi both emphasized the fact that "Skyline does not want to duplicate high school courses.

"We don't want to step on the high schools, and want to cooperate with them 100 per cent. We will not interfere or do anything to hurt the high school program."

The college's primary responsibility is to its own full-time students. "We can't be giving priority to the high school students and have our students bumped," Wyatt said.

Trying to keep both sides happy has evidently worked. According to Lombardi, "we have not had a complaint yet.

"The program gives the students the feeling of the college community. They find that they are responsible for themselves, and this makes them more mature," according to Wyatt.

The majority of the students are interested in the career programs, the academic field and the fine arts.

"They take introductory courses," Lombardi said. "When they graduate from high school, they go right into their major field of study. They're ahead of the game," he said.

"We've had some kids who have taken 16-18 units over two years. They come here, spend 1½ hours, then go on to a state college or a university," he said.

Each semester the high school enrollment grows. According to Lombardi, "We started with 56, then 78, 109, and now it's up to about 116-118."

Applications will be out in mid-March, and Lombardi estimated that enrollment may reach 130 this fall.

The only aspect of the Veysey program which could be considered a problem is transportation. Students must presently provide their own means for getting to the college, but according to Wyatt, "We are pursuing a possibility with the Jefferson Union High School District, and hopefully the other districts, for bus transportation.

"The district has school buses. If they could load up a bus with 50 students for oceanography, we could offer the class," he said.

"I spoke with the trustees a few weeks ago and they showed interest, but it's purely exploratory."

Wyatt contends that "the district uses the buses to take the kids to school and to bring them home. These buses probably stand idle during the day. Might it not be possible for one of those buses to come up here?"

He added "It's better for one bus to bring up 40 or 50 students than for these kids to bring up as many cars. I assume the gas supply for school buses is more dependable," he said.

Adolescents Course Will Be Offered

Helen Monea, child mental health nurse, will offer a five-week evening class at Mary's Help Hospital, Daly City, March 21-April 18, from 7-10 p.m.

This class will deal with concerns encountered in working with children, adolescents and parents. Concepts such as conflict, aggression, communication and touch will be explored to plan strategies related to clinical situations. This class is part of the program to bring continuing education to nurses and other health professionals in communities.

Ms. Monea was formerly on the School of Nursing faculty, University of California San Francisco. She is now in private practice as a child mental health nurse and has served as consultant for many of the school districts in the Bay Area.

AAUW Plans Annual Meet and Auction

The Pacifica Branch of the American Association of University Women will welcome spring with an auction of Plants, Pots and Related Items March 20.

The 8 p.m. auction will be held at the Periwinkle Gallery on Pedro Point and will benefit the Educational Foundation of AAUW.

The Educational Foundation manages the funding for the American and foreign fellowships given annually by the association. In addition, money is provided for the research and projects program, a growing program of grants in support of public interest projects, research, publications, pilot studies, and conferences.

AAUW Fellowships Auction planners are Ercel Kern, Ginger Walsh and Mary Jo Reintsma. They have asked Ingrid Lacy to wield the gavel once again, continuing her successful tenure as Pacifica's Fellowships Auctioneer.

Among the items on the block will be terrariums, original ceramic planters and pots, macrame pot hangers, herbs, trees, succulents, cuttings and cook books.

Most donations have been created and grown by Pacifica branch members.

A special guest will be Carole Bottarini, proprietor of Plant Happy, the complete indoor plant shop in the Fairmont Shopping Center.

Non-members are welcome to attend.

The auction will also serve as the annual meeting of the Pacifica branch and officers for 1974-75 will be elected. Members will be planning their attendance at the AAUW Bay Area District meeting March 23 at Skyline College.

Delegates will be Pat Robinson and Maurine McLean; alternates are Rita Finn, Maxine Oosterbaan and Janice Dutton.

The program will feature presentations on the association study topic, "Woman, Searching For Self."

Two TN Seniors In Program

Ann Edminster and Robert Wesberg Jr., both Terra Nova High School seniors, have been selected as two of the ten semi-finalists in the San Francisco Division for a Pacific Gas and Electric Company college scholarship.

The semi-final selection board will meet March 26 at the PG&E division headquarters in San Francisno.

Business Women Set SSF Meet

The Golden West Charter Chapter of American Women's Association will convene at the Royal Inn in South San Francisco for their monthly dinner meeting March 20. No host cocktails will be served from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., followed by dinner.

Mrs. Ruth Wess, program chairwoman, has invited John Regan, general manager of the Peninsula Humane Socity to be honored guest speaker.

Regan is a retired USAF colonel and served as command pilot, mainly in management and supervisory positions. He served as commander at four large bases, one of which was an international base which supported 11,000 people of seven nationalities.

Regan served in World War II, Korea and Vietnam. He currently resides in San Mateo with his wife and six children and is active in community affairs, having served as vice-chairman on the board of directors of the Bay Area Ballet Guild, member of board of directors of San Mateo Rotary Club and past president of the San Mateo Toastmasters Club.

Wilma Stisser, registered nurse at the Villa Sanitarium, will follow Regan on the podium as vocational speaker.

Members are reminded to turn in raffle ticket, stubs and money from the sale of tickets on the trip for two persons to Mexico on the Spirit of London. Funds from the sale of this raffle are earmarked for the scholarship fund.

Vallemar Holds Mock Election

The Upper room (third through fifth grade) of Pacifica's Vallemar School Open Class held a mock "City Council" election recently.

Winning candidates were Greg Dillender, Karen Ward, Sue Severan and Bill Barba.

Purpose of the "election" was to portray the elective process and good sportsmanship in politics. The excitement in the class was as high as the current Pacifica council race, it was reported. Trailing behind the winners were: Stella Lorvan, Jennifer Heath, Connie Mateu, Brenda McLain and Ondine Pullman.

Families interested in applying for the Vallemar Open Class are invited to visit the school to be escorted through the K-2 and 3-5 classrooms by parents on the Hospitality Committee.

For more information call the Vallemar School Office, 359-2444.

NEW UNIFORM MEAT IDENTITY PROGRAM AT SAFEWAY

You'll notice changes in some of the names on meat labels in our cases. We have adopted a new program under which meat retailers will use uniform names for the different cuts of meat they sell. In addition to helping you identify cuts, the plan also aids in selecting proper cooking methods. If, for example, the label shows a cut to be a steak or roast from Beef Loin or Beef Rib, dry heat cooking methods such as roasting, broiling and frying are recommended. For most other beef, moist cooking methods such as braising or cooking in liquid are recommended. Some tender cuts of beef not marked Loin or Rib may be cooked with dry heat but it is best to check your cookbook on these.

Dyan Cannon Makes Plastic Singing Debut

THE MARQUEE

By Barbara Bladen

Actress Dyan Cannon was building a nice career for herself in movies. She's made some good comedies, got an Oscar nomination for "Bob And Carol And Ted And Alice" and apparently has had a lot going for her personally since her heated divorce from Cary Grant.

She should have left well enough alone. Someone must have convinced her that singing and nightclubs would expand her horizons. But she's got a long way to go to compete with the big kids in those ranks.

A sexy body, she has. And a range bordering on Yma Sumac. Plus enough dynamics to gush and bounce all over the Fairmont's Venetian Room where she closes tonight.

But a strong voice, a polished act, class and quality are sorely missing. Even when her obvious nervousness is quieted and the score of technicians who are crawling all over the stage, light booth, side spots and above her with a microphone boom work out the kinks, you'll only have an energetic actress spreading herself with a frenzy and making it seem to the patrons they're getting more than they're paying for.

She's staged and produced herself to the ultimate with three high rise stages built up across the side wall (not where the stage is) on which are perched four brass players, two electric guitarists, one bongo player (she takes over the bongos at one point and beats a mean but steady rhythm in duet with drummer Mike Buono), a piano and small organ keyboard.

Her appearance is through the back of the audience as she wriggles up to tables enroute with coy and effusive greetings. There's too much talk, too much girlish patter, too much amplification and too much activity which acts as a distraction rather than resulting in a smooth, polished production.

Sveltly encased in a white cut-out jersey skintight dress, her long blonde hair flying wildly, she resembles something off the beach at Waikiki (gardenia pinned behind her ear) backed by three handmaidens in brown native sarongs.

The trio backs her with harmonics and gestures much as Bette Midler and Tina Turner use their chorus to augment the act. But they're neither essential to the act nor good enough to enhance her star spot. Actually, they only serve to cover up her weaknesses. Nine Musicians are too much for her thin voice to hurdle right now.

When she drops all the Las Vegas-Hollywood hipness and sits quietly at the piano accompanying herself in her own composition "Jennifer," for her seven-year-old daughter, she's at her best.

Miss Cannon hasn't found herself in this new image yet. Her repertoire is too much of everything, including "Since I Fell For You," "Stoney End," "You Are My Sunshine," "Nine Piece Band," "Come Sip My Wine" and a Latin segment.

Her debut comes off as plastic, none of her real warmth I know her to have comes through. The vivacity of her personality needs harnessing for so intimate a showcase where

'One Stop' Complaint Form Here

Assemblyman Louis J. Papan (D-Daly City) announced this week the availability of a new "one stop" consumer complaint form intended to simplify the process of making a consumer complaint.

There are 75 common areas of complaints listed on the form, plus a space for "other" complaints.

The new form does not replace existing forms, but is designed for people not knowing whom to contact for help.

The one stop system was originated by the Department of Consumer Affairs but includes the Departments of Food and Agriculture, Banking, Corporations, Education, Housing and Community Development, Insurance, Justice, Motor Vehicles, Health, Real Estate, Savings and Loan, Social Welfare and Veterans Affairs, the Office of the Fire Marshal, and the Public Utilities Commission.

The one stop complaint form is available at offices of all of these agencies, and most other state office buildings.

PEDRO POINT BEACH was a mess so students from Jefferson High School spent all day Wednesday doing something about it. Members of the "Community Environmental Education" program — a group with some 30 participants — went out with trash bags, muscle and a lot of enthusiasm — and cleaned up the beach.

Gas Locator 'A Success'

A "gas locator service" manned by the staff of the county's Economic Opportunity Commission to inform the public where gasoline is available in the southern part of the county was highly successful in its first week of operation.

It it is to continue, however, it will have to be taken over by the county and individual cities.

This was the report given to the Commission Thursday night at the Martin Luther King Community Center in San Mateo by Ray Williams, who had headed up the program.

During its first Saturday of operation, Williams reported, approximately 350 calls were received, and staff members reported 10 stations were open in the Redwood City area, but none were open on Sunday.

Williams reported that although the county had provided "hot lines" for the program, the Economic Opportunity Commission has no funds to continue its operation.

The California Highway Patrol and the Sheriff's office provided information on where gasoline could be obtained, Williams said, and radioed in reports from Atherton, Redwood City, Menlo Park, East Menlo Park and the East Palo Alto areas where pumps were operating.

Some 75 to 80 per cent of the calls received were to ask where gasoline could be obtained, and 50 per cent of these were for emergency requests from motorists who needed gas that day or were already completely out of fuel.

Many of the calls were the result of the original "considerable confusion" over the system of odd and even days, and, according to Williams, many people thought the even days were Modnay, Wednesday and Fridays, while the odd days were Tuesdays and Thursdays, with Saturday a day for everybody.

Calls were received from Sacramento, Los Angeles, Big Sur, Reno and even from Ohio from motorists either planning to come to San Mateo County or pass through it.

"You have to plan now to get your petrol," Williams commented, noting America has always had a sufficient supply previously. He said many callers told of "vicious experiences," and reported, "Everyone seemed to be out for himself. But now they are willing to wait for two hours."

Williams reported that motorists seemed to have accepted increased costs without complaint, and the "typical response" was, "I'll go anywhere to get gas."

He said staff members have been getting about 300 calls a day," but often people "just seem to need someone to listen to their experiences."

Edward R. Becks, executive director of the commission, said Daly City is developing a system based on the E.O.C. program, and now Oakland is taking it up.

But, Becks warned, "We are not trying to be in this business." He reported that a "training team" is being sent to Daly City today.

Mrs. Dolores Randall, commission chairman, asked if poor people are suffering more because of the lengthy wait in lines.

"There is only so much of a supply, and there is not much we can do," Williams answered. He said he noticed one station open today with no line, and a station on the opposite corner with a lengthy line. The need, he indicated, is to get the information to the people.

William Tupper, a representative of the Central Labor Council on the commission, asked about the "disparity in prices, pointing out that the price of a gallon varied from 52 to 68 cents within a few miles.

"I don't like to be ripped off, either," he asserted.

Williams reported, "It is pretty loose now; pretty much up to the dealer."

Becks predicted little will be done until the oil lobby achieves two coups — to get more money and to keep the conservationists in line so they can do all kinds of crazy drilling."

Nelson forecast that other cities will begin their own programs within the next few weeks — based on the existing program.

Becks added he was "convinced" most cities will pick up the program.

Mrs. Allison Glickman, coordinator of the county's Head Start program for preschool aged children, said while the energy crises had an impact on the program at first "somehow we muddled through it."

Journalism Conference In April

Outstanding professional journalists in both the print and electronic media will highlight a half-day conference for high school students at Skyline College April 27.

The four-part sessions co-sponsored by Crestmoor High School and Skyline College is open to all students from San Francisco and San Mateo County high schools who are interested in journalism. Admission is free.

The conference titled "The Working Journalist: Problems and Solutions" will begin at 9 a.m. with registration and welcome; four sessions in which media guests will speak and hold workshops; and a free lunch will be available in the Skyline College cafeteria. Along with these sessions there will be opportunities for the journalism advisors, student editors and staff, and media guests to meet and discuss in informal sessions.

High school students need not be members of their school journalism or media programs to attend this conference. However, they are urged to contact their school advisors or counselors prior to attending the conference for details on the conference and transportation.

Students, advisors, teachers, and professional journalists interested in attending the conference are urged to contact either Ms. Leslie Lafayette at Crestmoor or San Goldman at Skyline.

$200,000 Awarded

A civil jury has awarded a San Francisco physician $200,000 on his claim he was wrongfully denied privileges for surgery at Mary's Help Hospital in Daly City.

The 6-2 verdict was returned by a jury to San Mateo County Superior Court Judge G. Brooks Ice late Friday.

The award was returned in favor of Dr. Joseph A. Visalli, a general surgeon now listed as associated with the Franklin Medical Center in San Francisco. The jury deliberated for slightly more than two days after a seven-week trial in Redwood City. The minimum for a verdict is six votes.

The dispute between Dr. Visalli and the hospital erupted in 1968, according to court documents.

Simplified, Judge Ice said Dr. Visalli claimed Mary's Help improperly curtailed his privileges to use the surgery and emergency rooms at the hospital.

Hospital officials argued otherwise.

A focal point was interpretation of a regulation at the new Mary's Help Hospital dealing with certification and qualifications for use of the surgery room.

Basically, although there were other legal complexities, an issue was whether Dr. Visalli was eligible to perform thoracic (chest) surgery at the new hospital. He contended he was, while the hospital believed otherwise, according to Judge Ice's recapitulation of the case.

Other issues also were argued during the lengthy trial.

The physician sued for lost income, lost prestige and punitive damages. Judge Ice, after the plaintiff's case, dismissed the civil suit against several individually named physicians.

SSF Seeks Way Out of Bind

South San Francisco's City Council Monday agreed to pay the southern California landscape architectural firm of Recreation Systems, up to $3870 for the Sign Hill Park master plan to up its pending grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The city is currently in a bind which could cost it hundreds of thousands of dollars, acting Parks and Recreation Director Dick Milkovich warned the city council.

The city has a two-year-old application pending for a $38,000 grant to be matched by the city, dollar for dollar.

"Here is what it is supposed to do," Milkovich declared. "Irrigation and sprinkler system, parking area, access road, observation point, restroom, picnic facilities, passive play and recreation facilities, hiking and bicycling system."

The project can wind up costing a quarter of a million dollars. Under HUD rules, he explained, when a city obtains a grant, it must complete the project according to the description on its application. Thus, the city can be liable for spending over $200,000, instead of $38,000, on Sign Hill. He blamed the under-estimate on his predecessors in office.

He said he hoped that Recreation Systems' cost analysis would convince HUD that a mistake had been made on the city's grant application.

"Or maybe the figures will even convince us to forget the project for the time being."

Bill Borba, who had stepped down from the city council last week, added his protest from the audience to hiring an outsider as a landscape architect.

"Are we getting trapped into another VTN deal?" he asked. "I've sat on the council four years — and everything is of an urgency nature."

Milkovich replied that there are no landscape architects in South San Francisco. He judged the firm, specializing in parks, the best in the state.

Councilmen hired the Oakland landscape architectural firm of Ribera & Sue to design the six-acre Appian Way Park, in southwest Westborough, for a maximum of $1,750. A possible $300,000 cost was mentioned for development of the park.

Councilman Frank Mammini objected to starting another Westborough Park before the first one was completed.

Milkovich reported that the city has been requested by Grubb & Ellis, building a giant apartment project in Westborough, to develop four tennis courts on the site, next to the project. Two would be donated to the city, and two would be for the exclusive use of the tenants.

Milkovich said he opposed the request, but was shown an agreement, signed by the city, promising to design the park by Jan. 1, 1974, and to build it by July 1, 1974 — or the site would go back to the developers.

Mirri objected that the park was meant to serve all the people of Westborough — not just to become another amenity of the developer. The tennis courts also might block access to the rest of the park, he said.

When the council balked at his request, Alario said, "We have just been pulling figures out of the air, because of various pressures. All we are asking is for a working design so that we could see what the park would look like. At least we would have accurate figures as of a particular time."

Development of the park was originally slated for 1978. City officials, however, may try to postpone start of construction of the park until after Phase 3 of Westborough Park, it was indicated.

One park improvement appeared to be non-controversial.

Councilmen approved plans and specifications for baseball backstops at Southwood and Parkway schools — and called for bids on the project, estimated to cost $25,000.

The city will match the school district's $12,500 for the project.

New Councilman Leo Padreddii who had worked on the project as a school trustee was particularly happy over the project.

New recreational facilities were most frequently asked about during his recent council campaign, he noted.

Bond Issue Is Voted

The South San Francisco City Council Monday night adopted an ordinance to place a $4½ million bond issue for a new public safety complex on the June 4 ballot.

The county has approved placing of the bond issue on the county ballot in conjunction with the statewide primary election.

A new police station and central firehouse would be erected on a site recently purchased on Grand and Chestnut avenues.

Mayor Terry Mirri read a list of approximately 30 of South San Francisco's leading citizens, from all sections of the city, whom he was inviting to constitute the Public Safety Bond Committee. Both new councilmen, Leo Padreddii and Richard Battaglia, added some nominations of their own to the committee.

The bond committee will meet next Tuesday.

Publicity Workshop Set

Jim Jones, executive director of the San Mateo County Convention & Visitors Bureau, will lead a publicity workshop for all Scout unit leaders March 23 at the Scouting Center, 1300 South Bayshore Blvd., San Mateo, from 10 a.m. until noon.

All unit leaders and or publicity chairmen, as well as district executives and commissioners are invited to attend the free workshop.
